Teen Cartoon & Illustration Club
Forty-Eighth Juried Exhibition
Welcome

Welcome to the 48th! As always, Athens artists continue pushing boundaries and creating substantial works. The Lyndon House Arts Center is proud and lucky to be part of this arts community.

This year we participated in many co-authored activities in support of advocacy in the arts. Core to our mission is elevating the professional standing of career creatives. At the 2022 Arts Summit, artist Charmaine Minniefield spoke to us about collaborations, ancestry, praise houses. Funders had trade tips about grant writing, and an attorney spoke about intellectual property. We followed up with workshops on preparing your art for exhibition, framing and shipping.

Picture This, a traveling show in the Highlighting Contemporary Art in Georgia series, an on-going partnership with the Georgia Museum of Art, launched this year. Now traveling until 2024 throughout the state, the talents of Athens based painters, is being shared in regional museums. The Arts Center on the road!

Our teen clubs were busy with a public art program resulting in murals on this campus and a first-time runway fashion show of original designed garments. We were happy to welcome back the CCSD Student Art Biennial exhibition. We love this collaboration. Connecting with students and the wonderful art teachers in the public school system is just inspiring. Our relationship with the Athens Downtown Development Authority led to children art banners on all the new light poles along Clayton Street.

Our Artist in Residence program continues to grow with artist Victoria Dugger who has been working in the studio preparing for an exhibit in Atlanta. “Having the opportunity to continue my work in Athens, and cultivate relationships has been immeasurable to my growth as an artist and my emerging career.” – Victoria Dugger

The Historic Ware Lyndon House opened a new interpretive exhibit Resilient Civic and Musical Life: Ware-Lyndon House Enslaved and Descendant Stories funded by grants from Community Challenge AARP and GA Humanities. A short film is available for viewing and the newly established Athens African American Heritage Pathway signage can be spotted here, First AME, Hot Corner and more.

With all the wonderful connections in working together with others, the new friends and colleagues, we have to say good-bye, for now, to some important members of the Arts Center’s team. Our two interns, Lisa Parrish and Lilly McEachern, both now have new full time jobs in the curatorial fields. Ciel Rodriguez, formally in the Open Studio role, has a full time position at the Carlos Museum in Atlanta. We are all so very proud of these young women setting the standard for professional practice in art museums. However, it is Shannon Williams, who we will considerably miss as after 22 years. Shannon has retired from her position at the Lyndon House Arts Center. Thank you Shannon for your welcoming embraces, patient problem solving, artist encouragement and all you contributed to the Lyndon House Arts Center.

So, 48!! Our juror, Maria Elena Ortiz, now Curator at The Modern in Fort Worth Texas, reviewed 682 works of art by 245 Athens area artists. For this show, Ms. Ortiz chose 154 works by 107 local artists. Please enjoy her thoughts published in this booklet. And forever, we thank Athens artists for your continued support for this community arts center and this community wide art event. You are amazing!

Enjoy the 48th!

Pérez Collection, The Other Side of Now: Foresight in Caribbean Art, Teresita Fernández: Elemental, American Echo Chamber: José Carlos Martinat, william cordova: now’s the time, Beatriz Santiago Muñoz: A Universe of Fragile Mirrors, Ulla von Brandenburg: It Has a Golden Sun and an Elderly Grey Moon, Firelei Báez: Bloodlines, and Carlos Motta: Histories for the Future, among others.

Her exhibitions have traveled to prestigious institutions including the Andy Warhol Museum, Pittsburgh; El Museo de Barrio, New York; and the DePaul Art Museum, Chicago. Words from Our Juror

At the Lyndon House Arts Center, the 48th Juried Exhibition is the ideal opportunity to get the pulse of what is sparking creativity within the artist’s community. This year, hundreds of exceptional artists applied with captivating works, including sculpture, drawing, painting, printmaking, film, photography, metals, fiber art and mixed media arts. The exhibition presents a selection of over 100 works representative of the diversity of art produced in the region. The selection includes works that deal with themes of landscape, identity, abstraction, along with conceptual strategies. Congratulations to all the artists that submitted to the call for sharing your work. The works submitted provide a new insight about the story of art in this country. It was a difficult task to make selections. I enjoyed the process because it facilitated a deeper understanding of the region with many forms of art making. The works selected showcase a bold perspective. To all the artists selected, your work sparked curiosity, delight, and inspiration--thank you. I extend my gratitude to the team at Lyndon House Arts Center for their professionalism.

In the exhibition, there are several themes seen across the different media that represent notions seen across the US. The selection of fiber arts provides insights into contemporary and refreshing approaches towards quilting and textiles, building on the history of American quilting in the South. Here, the works include representational fiber works and abstract compositions that challenge traditional notions of quilting. With a provocative title, Woman Smarter than the Devil Himself (2022) is a figurative textile work in which a Black man holding a pitchfork seems to be threatened by a Black woman holding a knife. The scene is impactful, but its digital technique combining figuration with textiles creates a contemporary attitude to the work. The themes in Fiber Arts has significant overlaps with the paintings in the exhibition, specifically with abstraction. Cast Out (2022) is a striking abstract work in which a red net covers the canvas, resulting in a harmonious and seductive composition. Fiber artists manipulated textiles to create geometric forms and associations that blurred the boundaries between textiles and traditional painting.

In photography and painting, landscape is a strong theme in the show, illustrating nature from a romantic, mysterious, and powerful perspective. With a mysterious atmosphere, On the Edge # 1 is an example of a conceptual approach to photography in which an architectural structure appears in a cloudy setting. There are several paintings that depict the human figure with its psychological realm, in which people appear in the midst of experiencing an emotion expressed in their body and facial gestures. A Memory (2022) shows a white woman with a tense expression, emphasizing her subjectivity and emotion. These figurative paintings of everyday life, with additional works at times including images of family settings, people gatherings, and women embracing children.
In fiber arts and painting, several works have a political impulse that reflect upon current situations in national politics, such as Traitor: Abettors in Sedition (2020)—which also highlights Georgia’s connection to the national elections. Autobiography in Red (2022) and Lecture on Motion II: Your Orbit (2022) are two videos in the exhibition and the most conceptual body of work in the show. Using texts, images, and sound, these videos represent ideas deconstructing the elements of traditional film. Also, ceramics in the exhibition are remarkable, embodying the artist’s accomplishments. Whimsical and surreal depictions are seen in works throughout the show with works such as The Profoundness of this Freedom (2022) and Weirdness Club (2022). Engaging with humor, paintings like Corn Dogs (2020), allude to Pop art strategies, illustrating images from popular culture. The prints in the exhibition are powerful illustrations that deal with history and the graphic arts. All the works make possible a comprehensive picture of art production in the region.

All of these artists created works inspired by the histories, cultures, and environments of Georgia, reflecting on today. The artists epitomize currents trends in contemporary art such as scenes of the everyday, figuration, textiles, abstraction, conceptual video, and experimental works on paper. The exhibition illustrates the convergence of different art practices and mediums breaking the boundaries among traditional forms of making and craft. The selection is a microcosm of what happens creatively locally, echoing national trends.
